DAUGHERTY PROBE CALLED FARCE AND FRAME-UP WITH CONCLUSIONS BASED ON TISSUE OF LIES

Boy Axman Confesses Slaying of His Aunt

3 TINY COUSINS ALSO HACKED; TWO OF THEM MAY DIE

14-Year-Old's Admission of Guilt in Quadruple Crime Stops Hunt for Suspected Negro.

YOUTHFUL KILLER GAVE DEATH ALARM

Lad Declared Negro Frightened Him Away From Home When He Told First Story.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Columbia, S. C., September 21.—Asbury Wessinger, 14-year-old boy, confessed to officers today that he fatally wounded his aunt, Mrs. Lina Wessinger, and seriously injured her three small children with an axe late yesterday.

Mrs. Wessinger died last night at a local hospital. The three children were found in the house, each showing axe wounds. Newman, age six, and Rufus, age four, are in a critical condition today but it is believed that Azile, one year old, will recover.

The boy's confession, made to several officers, put an end to a search by hundreds of armed men for a negro who was at first reported to have made the attack. Asbury gave the alarm himself and told a story of having been frightened away from his aunt's home by a tall black negro.

Issue Murder Warrant.

Following young Wessinger's confession, a warrant charging him with murder was issued and the youth placed in the Columbia city jail to be held for Lexington county authorities.

In his confession to officers, the boy admitted that the story that he told of the "tall, black negro" chasing him from the house and then attacking his aunt and her children was for the purpose of diverting suspicion from himself.

The only reason given by the boy for the attack was a difficulty he had with his aunt over a knife which he said he had lost while visiting the Wessinger home and failed to find when he returned for it. He declared that he "got mad" and "lost my temper" during the argument.

Attacked Tots First.

In the discussion over the knife, the boy told officers that his aunt had used "rough words" to him, which he said, made him "mad."

Describing his movements before and during the attack, young Wessinger said after the argument, his aunt left the house, and went into the yard. He said he then obtained an axe handle and attacked the children, who were sitting on the steps of the house. He hit the oldest child first, he said, and then struck the next oldest. He declared he did not remember hitting the youngest child.

Stepping over the prostrate forms of the three children, he said he went out into the yard and picked up an axe which was lying near a wood shed. At this time, his aunt had started to milk a cow some distance away from the house, the boy said.

Struck Her From Rear.

Approaching the woman from the rear, young Wessinger stated that he raised the axe and struck just as his victim turned her head. She toppled from the stool on which she was sitting and the boy, in answer to questions, said he must have hit her twice as she lay upon the ground. He hit her with the blunt side of the axe, he said. According to the boy's story, she did not speak and made no outcry. He then left the house, went to his own home some distance away and told his father the story of his aunt and the children being attacked by a "tall, black negro."

Owing to the absence from the county of the solicitor, the highest over the body of Mrs. Wessinger has been postponed until his return from court in another county, it was stated. Three negroes who were arrested last night and were being held in connection with the attack were released today.

We can't all be—nor do we all wish to be—Globe-trotters. Of course there's no place like home, etc.

But, while enjoying the comforts of "home, sweet home," the only way to keep in the swim is to be conversant with world happenings.

You "keep up" because you read The Constitution.

Scientist Promises Mankind Life To Shame Methuselah

CLAIMS 1,000 YEARS OF LIFE QUITE POSSIBLE

Philadelphia, September 21.—Men in the prime of life now will have a chance to live 1,000 years, according to Professor Fritz Haber, eminent German scientist, who has been in this city attending the centenary celebration of the Franklin institute.

Professor Haber, who is director of the Prussian academy of physical and chemical science, in an interview expressed his positive opinion that the next great scientific achievement would produce such a result.

He declared that science would bring forth discoveries that would produce a race of supermen, who may expect to live as long as 1,000 years, through elimination of the causes of natural death.

Pointing his finger at the interviewer, who is under 30, he exclaimed: "You will see it."

He was less impressive from the strictly scientific point of view, an opinion of Doctor Haber's, that science will never be able to create life, itself.

SUSPECT PREACHER OF THIRD SLAYING AND U. S. WILL GET BIDS TO PARLEYS

High School Girl's Picture Starts Police on New Scent.

Mount Vernon, Ill., September 21.—Circumstances of a third death were being investigated today by State Attorney Thompson following the finding of the picture of a girl in the home of the Reverend L. M. Hight, of Ida, held on a charge of murder in connection with the deaths of his wife, Anna, and Wilford Sweetin, believed to have been caused by poison.

Poison of the same kind has been found in the stomachs of both. The girl died, according to a story told the authorities by the clergyman, three years ago, of ptomaine poisoning. He told the state's attorney the girl lived in Centerville, Ill., and was a high school student, but he did not remember her name. The Reverend Hight, it was said, once had charge of a congregation in Centerville.

U. S. WORLD FLIERS LAND IN TUCSON

Cavalry Guards Keep Crowds of Welcomes Entirely Off of Arizona Landing Field.

Tucson, Ariz., September 21.—Uncle Sam's round-the-world fliers completed another lap in their long journey today, landing at the Tucson aviation field at 1:58 o'clock, mountain time, after an uneventful flight from El Paso.

Thousands of persons were massed around the field when the big planes, flying in close triangular formation, appeared over the rugged Rincon mountains, circled the field twice and then landed at two-minute intervals.

Tucson no doubt will be remembered by the world fliers as one place where they were not stormed by enthusiastic crowds when they came from their machines.

A guard of United States cavalry, assisted by national guardsmen and sheriff's deputies kept the crowd at such a distance from the planes that the pilots and their mechanics had the field virtually to themselves. They taxied their planes into position, stepped from them and then walked to a point where the guards were keeping even the official reception committee away from the ropes.

A varied program awaited them here. Immediately after leaving the field they were guests at a luncheon given by local reserve corps officers. During the afternoon the fliers visited the United States veterans' bureau hospital here. A public reception was held for them in a hotel. Later the fliers and mechanics devoted an hour to going over their planes.

CANAL ZONE JUDGE DIES AS HE SCORES LA FOLLETTE AIMS

Balboa, C. Z., September 21.—While delivering a vigorous address against Senator La Follette's proposal to subordinate the power of the supreme court to that of congress, John R. Wallingford, of Des Moines, Iowa, judge of the Canal Zone district court, suddenly dropped dead from heart failure.

Judge Wallingford was addressing a banquet of the American Legion.

He is confident, however, that the achievement of prolonging life from the present expectation of "three years and ten," to ten centuries, will be accomplished by scientists now laboring over their researches.

Insulin, the epochal discovery which is at last helping the medical profession to fight diabetes, has been the first step, Haber said, and is the concrete example that the principle and formula on which the scientists are working to prolong life is fundamentally sound.

This prolongation of life, according to the professor, will come through a method of purifying all the various types of enzymes in the body. Insulin is the purification of one type of enzyme, the organic or chemical duty of which is to split the monosaccharides in the human system.

COOLIDGE HAILS U. S. CONSTITUTION AS LIBERTY GUARD

President Stresses Sections Which Guarantee Civil and Religious Freedom to All Citizens.

EVERY INDIVIDUAL HIS OWN SOVEREIGN

American Ideals of Government Founded on Deep Reverence for God, Executive Declares.

Washington, September 21.—(By the Associated Press.)—The essence of freedom, President Coolidge told an audience of delegates to the Holy Name Society convention here today, is "civil, political and religious liberty," as "solely declared in the fundamental law of the land."

"Our constitution," he declared, "guarantees it fully, completely and adequately."

Mr. Coolidge then emphasized that the constitution also provides "no religious test shall ever be required as a qualification to any office or public trust under the United States."

"I do not say that we, as citizens, have always held ourselves to a proper observance of these standards toward each other," he continued, "but we have nevertheless established them and declared our duty to be obedient to them. This is the American ideal of ordered liberty under the law. It calls for rigid discipline."

The president went into a thorough exposition of his theory of American government in the address. The government, he said, was the result of an effort to establish institutions under which the people as a whole should have the largest possible advantages.

Privilege Outlawed.

"Class and privilege were outlawed," he asserted, "freedom and opportunity were guaranteed, America is not going to abandon its principles or desert its ideals."

The principle which the Holy Name society represents, the president declared, is the "main support" of these ideals. Reverence for God is the foundation of American institutions, he said, and "unnumbered organizations."

Found United Party.

Davis is proceeding to his country estate at Locust Valley, where he will rest several days before taking up his campaign.

In the states I visited on this trip, which included West Virginia, Indiana, Illinois, Wyoming, Iowa, Nebraska, Colorado, Kansas and Missouri, I found the democratic party intact and undivided," Davis' statement declares. "Its members are working together with an absolute unity of purpose and with an interest which I have never seen surpassed in any campaign."

Davis pointed out that in his tour he had an opportunity to study the situation at first-hand, and then proceeded to carry the attack into the republican camp.

"Everywhere that I have been I have heard but one story," the statement said. "It has come to me from

Five Are Injured In Auto Crashes

J. D. Wellborn Narrowly Escapes Injury When His Machine Is Struck by Liquor Car.

As the result of automobile accidents, five persons were treated at Grady hospital Sunday.

The injured were H. M. Withers, 84 Mendrix avenue; J. G. Garey, 239 Confederate avenue; H. H. Thornton, R. F. D., Fayetteville, Ga.; Arthur W. Giles, 85 Lovejoy street, and William A. Hines, 21 Williams street.

Withers, who was injured on East Georgia avenue, near Capitol avenue, told hospital nurses that the machine that struck him down was driven by R. R. Tatum, of 72 East avenue. No report of this accident has been filed at police station.

Two Men Are Injured.

No information as to how Garey and Thornton were hurt could be learned. Both appeared at Grady and were treated for lacerations about the face and arms, both stating they had been struck by an automobile. Police are without a report of this accident.

Giles and Hines were injured in a crash between the car in which they were riding and an automobile driven by E. P. Tolinson, of 55 Plum street. This accident happened on Hemphill avenue and Exposition street.

According to information given Call Officers Fred L. Tippen and M. C. Williams, the automobile containing Giles and Hines was driven by Earl Bailey, who lives at Clayton and Dwayne streets. Bailey left the scene of the wreck before the police arrived. Both machines were badly damaged.

Conscience-Smitten Thief Returns Package of Bonds

$1,500 WORTH OF BONDS PLACED IN OWNER'S CAR

Milledgeville, Ga., September 21.—(Special.)—A clear conscience is a wonderful thing. In this case, it points a moral and adorns a tale. It undoubtedly will have a large influence on the life of some unidentified man, and it certainly was of material benefit to G. O. Barnes, of Devereaux, Georgia.

On last Friday, Barnes came to Milledgeville on business, leaving his car at a local garage for about an hour while he made several calls in this city. On his return trip, he noticed a pair of new cloth gloves, to which was attached an envelope, in the rear seat of his machine.

On the envelope were the simple directions, "Look inside." Being the natural thing to do, Barnes looked inside, and found $1,500 worth of bonds. Now these same bonds had been stolen eight months ago—on January 22—when crackmen blew open the safe in Barnes' store at Devereaux.

and escaped with the bonds. No clue to the robber's identity was found, and after a long search, the hunt was abandoned.

The return of the papers was cloaked in mystery, as employees of the garage in which Barnes stored his machine in Milledgeville stated that no stranger had been in the building during his absence. It would have been almost impossible for anyone to have thrown the package into the machine while Barnes was driving without being detected by him.

Whatever the manner of returning the valuable papers, Barnes is satisfied. No explanation of either the theft or the motive for return of the bonds was contained in the package, and Barnes is of the opinion that the thief, his conscience smitten, returned them to end his own mental suffering. The bonds are negotiable and could have been disposed of easily.

WEST IS WEARY OF G. O. P. MISRULE, DECLARES DAVIS

Democratic Candidate for President Confident of Sweeping Victory at November Election.

New York, September 21.—"After having traveled 5,000 miles in my initial campaign trip, I return with the conviction that all signs point to a sweeping democratic victory in the coming election."

With this confident declaration John W. Davis, democratic candidate for the presidency, greeted New York when he arrived here Sunday night from his western tour. At the Grand Central station, where he was met by a delegation headed by Thomas J. Spellacy and including friends and neighbors from Locust Valley, Davis issued a statement jammed with optimism and tense with campaign fire.

He attacked the administration for inefficiency, corruption and an attitude of negation, and reported that he had found the Midwest keenly alive to international affairs and disappointed in the administration's foreign policy.

DAWES FARM PLAN BRANDED "STALL"

Representative Aswell Scores Idea of Expert Probe of Needs as Evasion of Real Issue.

Washington, September 21.—The Dawes plan for agricultural relief, as outlined in the Sioux Falls speech of the republican vice presidential candidate, bitterly was assailed today by Representative Aswell, of Louisiana, ranking democrat on the house agricultural committee.

Charging that the immediate purpose of General Dawes' plan is to "stall the farmers off until after election," Representative Aswell asserted that as a relief measure "it means nothing or it means misery for millions of thousands of farmers."

In support of his contention the Louisiana congressman declared that a plan similar to that advocated by General Dawes was tried out by President Harding, and proved abortive.

No Relief Attempted.

The republican leaders in congress appointed a commission in 1921. In support of his contention the Louisiana congressman declared that a plan similar to that advocated by General Dawes was tried out by President Harding, and proved abortive.

"Both investigated," he said, "while farm families continued to suffer and to be driven from their lands upon the citizenship of one midwest where, as one of the great thinkers of our time has said, 'Lies the center of the most progressive population in the world.'"

MADISON DEATH RATE FOR AUGUST IS HIGH

Huntsville, Ala., September 21.—(Special.)—The August report of the Madison county health department shows 138 births, or a rate of 31.41 per thousand per annum. The death rate for August was 16.92 per thousand.

Replying to the argument advanced by General Dawes in support of his contention that "relief for the farmers must not be furnished by political action," but must come from "an expert committee to be appointed by President Coolidge to study all of the phases of agriculture."

LA FOLLETTE PLAYS FOR FOREIGN VOTE IN GOTHAM SPEECH

Address Before Steuben Society Praises Foreign-Born Citizens for "Progressive" Ideas.

CANDIDATE DENIES SPEECH IS POLITICAL

Wisconsin Senator Denounces War Actions of Americans in Boycotting All Things German.

New York, September 21.—Avoiding any direct reference to the political campaign, Senator La Follette, independent presidential candidate, paid a strong tribute Sunday to the foreign elements in the United States, from which he is expected to gather considerable strength in November.

Addressing the Steuben society at the Yankee stadium, La Follette referred to "the heart-breaking humiliation" suffered by citizens of German blood "under the stress of war hysteria," and declared:

"The German element in our population passed through that reign of terror with extraordinary credit and fortitude."

Disclaims Politics.

"I do not address you as a candidate," the senator said at the outset. "I am not here to discuss political issues. My purpose is to suggest in a few words how much the nations of Europe have contributed to the advancement of the United States. It is fitting on this occasion that I should dwell especially on the great part played by the German element in our population in the making of America."

La Follette commended the support "accorded by Wisconsin citizens of German stock to our progressive movement" and also the general readiness of midwestern citizens of immigrant stock from "Germany, Scandinavia, Ireland, Poland and elsewhere" to absorb progressive political ideas.

Denounces American Actions.

He denounced the refusal of American communities shortly after the war to hear the music of Wagner or to listen to Kreisler, the great Austrian violinist, and criticized the movement in some states to forbid the teaching of German or other foreign languages in the schools.

"The folly and stupidity that prompted this legislation interfering with American liberty was bound to be short-lived," he said. "A like fate awaits every form of bigotry and fanaticism attempted in this country."

The most of La Follette's address was devoted to a discussion of the important political, civic, artistic and patriotic services rendered this country by racial elements arriving later than the original colonial stock.

Tribute to Germans.

"It is estimated that 80 per cent of our people are of different origin from the colonial descendant group," he pointed out.

"The real test of American citizenship is not the family tree," La Follette asserted. "Nor does it lie in being able to trace ancestry back to colonial origin. The real test is the citizen's enthusiasm and determination to share in the every-day work of making the government of the United States serve its original purpose."

"You will not misunderstand me if I testify on this occasion to the support accorded by Wisconsin citizens of German stock to our progressive movement," he said. "Both in the making and in the faithful administration of the laws they have been an indispensable part of our achievement and success. Our German element may be conservative in temperament, but they have such a deep civic consciousness and a high sense of duty, that once convinced of the soundness of an issue, once enlisted in a cause, they adhere to it with patience and zeal and courage until it has been settled right."

"I speak with special feeling of the influence of homeseekers from foreign lands upon the citizenship of our midwest where, as one of the great thinkers of our time has said, 'Lies the center of the most progressive population in the world.'"

Washington, September 21.—Gaston B. Means denies having made the affidavit attached to the open letter to John W. Davis by former Attorney General Daugherty. He said he hoped the Brookhart committee would meet soon so that the whole matter could be aired and further testimony taken.

"I positively never made any such affidavit. I understand that Senator Wheeler has issued a brief statement in advance of the publication of the Daugherty charges. It reads in part: 'I have not seen the statement made by Means before making any comment myself, since the charges are made against Senator Wheeler, myself and others.'"

DAUGHERTY STICKS TO TRUTH OF LETTER.

Columbus, Ohio, September 21.—Gaston B. Means admitted to the United News Sunday night that he had signed a statement for Harry M. Daugherty, but declared it was not an affidavit, and was not a sworn statement.

He said he regarded it as a "trivial matter," and did not even read the paper he signed before affixing his signature, and therefore did not know whether the statement made public by Daugherty was the paper he had signed. There were no witnesses present, he said.

Means persisted in the denial made to the United News Sunday night that he had signed an affidavit.

Columbus, Ohio, September 21.—(By the Associated Press.)—Reputation as a "issue of lies" of all that he told the senate committee in its investigation of the administration of Harry M. Daugherty as attorney general, has been made in a signed statement by Gaston B. Means, former department of justice agent, and star witness for the Daugherty investigators, according to a copy of a statement made public at his home here today by Mr. Daugherty.

The Means statement was incorporated in a letter sent by Mr. Daugherty to John W. Davis, the democratic nominee for president, in which the former attorney general takes the candidate to task for statements which Daugherty's letter says Davis has made in address throughout the country "suggesting improper conduct."

this involves the oil investigation, because Senator Wheeler was constantly in close touch with Senators Walsh and La Follette in connection with this inquiry.

"While this frame-up was going on I was in conference with Senator Walsh, Senator Wheeler, Senator Dill, Robert La Follette and Philip La Follette. I have in my possession a subpoena issued by Senator Dill for me to appear before the Walsh committee and to testify to evidence that they framed up, and which plan was abandoned because Senator

Wheeler decided that he did not want any favorable publicity withdrawn from him in connection with the Daugherty investigation that might revert to Senator Dill and the Walsh committee.

Cites Other Perjury.

Briefly, there is available now all of the papers, documents and other material in connection with the Daugherty investigation which will absolutely offset the unfavorable record as it now stands; also in connection with these documents is a great deal of material in connection with the oil matter, including McAdoo's correspondence with Senators Walsh and Wheeler.

The testimony given before the Wheeler committee by Roxie Stinson.

son, R. Momand, myself and the majority of the other witnesses, was nothing but a tissue of lies put in the mouths of these witnesses by Senator Wheeler's department of justice and the administration.

"These witnesses and myself were persuaded to make these false statements by Senator Wheeler under threats of indictment in some cases and by promises of gain and aid in others.

"Briefly stated, the letters, correspondence and documents available will absolutely refute and confound the Wheeler-Daugherty investigation findings and throw an absolutely different light on the oil investigation where prominent democrats were urging that their names not be drawn into the matter.

"I spent weeks with Senator Wheeler talked personally to nearly every witness that appeared before the committee, and gained Senator Wheeler's confidence to the extent that I read, asserted and handled most of the letters, documents, etc., that came before the committee.

WHEELER DECLINES TO ANSWER CHARGES.

Chicago, September 21.—When informed of developments in connection with the letter of Attorney General Daugherty concerning the department of justice investigation, Senator Burton K. Wheeler authorized the following statement:

"The former attorney general's letter is addressed to the democratic candidate for president. The latter, I have no doubt, will answer it with reasonable promptitude. Until he does, obviously it is not proper for me to comment.

"I can only say at the moment that this action by Mr. Daugherty occurs to me no surprise, since Means had advised me before I left Washington that heaven and earth were being moved to induce him to repudiate his testimony.

"It serves to show how vitally necessary it is that there should be a complete housecleaning in our government in Washington, and that Daugherty's influence is still strong in the administration."

Apparently unconcerned about further developments in the controversy that raged around him, Wheeler retired by 8 o'clock for a long night's sleep in preparation for the 33-day tour westward which he will begin Monday morning.

His trip will carry him to practically every large city of the west and Pacific coast.

In a crash with a whisky-laden car which police were chasing, J. D. Wellborn, of 1205 Peachtree street, narrowly escaped serious injury as his machine was damaged at Peachtree and Eleventh streets Sunday morning.

The driver of the whisky machine leaped out and escaped immediately after the collision and had not been apprehended late Sunday night.

Chase of the car was started by Patrolmen R. E. Pettis and D. L. Taylor on West Fourteenth street. Pursuit continued into West Peachtree street, thence to West Eleventh street where the car turned right and entered Peachtree street at high speed when he struck Wellborn's auto, which was going north.

Automobile and 22 gallons of liquor were confiscated by the police and a search immediately begun for the driver, who is reported to have been cut by flying glass.

Decatur, Ga., September 21.—(Special.)—Mrs. W. M. men regardless of previous party affiliations. It is one of dissatisfaction with the service rendered, or rather with the service denied, by the government during the last three and a half years. This feeling of unrest permeates every strata of society.

"The farmer resents the deception that was attempted by the republican party in placing an utterly ineffective tariff duty on his products. The laboring man is no longer deceived by the cry of republican prosperity and feels keenly the rising cost of living. The business man is weary of the impression on the public mind and the morals of the country that the leaders of the republican party are willing to admit. They have not been forgotten and will not be forgotten."

Interested in Foreign Policy.

Davis stressed the interest of the people of the middle west in the foreign policy of the United States.

"The people (in the middle west) are deeply interested in the foreign policy of the government, and entirely out of sympathy with the timid and evasive course which the present administration has pursued," he said. "They realize perfectly that the maintenance of a foreign market is necessary to their continued prosperity, and have a lively sense of America's moral obligation to contribute toward a permanent world peace."

Confident of Victory.

He declared that the "lack of leadership and coherence which the republican party has exhibited has made a deep impression," and further rapped the administration in saying that in the middle west people were "resentful that our navy has been permitted to fall in strength in comparison with other powers."

"I return to the east confident of success. Privilege has won its last battle," the statement concluded.

The first interruption of Davis' Sunday rest was at Utica, N. Y., where a cheering crowd of democrats drew him to the rear platform of the car.

"We are going to nominate, Al Smith for governor next week," one of the crowd told him.

"The sound good to me," said Davis, "and we are going to elect him."

AS LIBERTY GUARD

tions of which your own is one exist for its promotion."

The right of individual liberty, he went on, carried with it under the American government the right of individual property, and in this connection he declared "socialism and communism cannot be reconciled with the principles which our institutions represent."

The president kept closely to his theme without any direct reference to political questions. He questioned the immigration law as a reminder of the "high estimation in which our opportunities are held by other peoples."

Out of obedience to the constitution and service under the government, the president declared, "the people of our country have secured the greatest success that was ever before experienced in human history."

Evidence Is Cited.

"The evidence of this," he said, "is all about us in our wealth, our education, our facilities, our churches, our religious institutions, and in the moral influence which we exert on the world. Most of all, it is apparent in the unexampled place which is held by the people who toil. Our inhabitants are especially free to promote their own welfare. They are unburdened by military taxes. They are not called upon to support any imperialistic designs. Every mother can rest in the assurance that her children will find here a land of devotion, prosperity and peace."

"The tall shaft near which we are gathered and yonder stately memorial remind us that our standards of manhood are revealed in the adoration which we pay to Washington and Lincoln. They are unrivaled and unsurpassed. Above all else, they are American. The institutions of our country stand justified both in reason and in experience. I am aware that they will continue to be assailed. But I know they will continue to stand. We may perish, but they will endure. They are founded on the Rock of Ages."

Each Man Is Sovereign.

The president gave, particularly stress to the liberties, civil, political and religious, allowed under the constitution. A proper maintenance of these, he said, made it "important to understand the foundation on which they were built and the claims by which they justified the sovereign rights and royal estate of every American citizen."

"The foundation of our independence and our government," he continued, "rests upon our basic religious convictions. Back of the authority of our laws is the authority of the Supreme Judge of the world, to whom we still appeal for their final justification."

"The constitution and laws of our country are adopted and enacted through the direct action of the people, or through their duly chosen representatives. They reflect the enlightened conscience of our country. They ought always to speak with the true and conscientious voice of the people. Such voice has from time immemorial been the authority of divine sanction. In their great fundamentals they do not change. As new light arrives they may be altered in their details but they represent the best that we know at any given time. To support the constitution, to observe the laws, is to be true to our own higher nature. That is the path, and the only path, towards liberty. To resist them and violate them is to become enemies to ourselves and instruments of our own destruction. That is the path towards servitude. Obedience is not for the protection of someone else, but for the protection of ourselves. It needs to be remembered that it has to be secured not through the action of others, but through our own actions. Liberty is not collective, it is personal. All liberty is individual liberty."

His Rights Inalienable.

"Coincident with the right of individual liberty under the provisions of our government is the right of individual property. The position which the individual holds in the conception of American institutions, is higher than that ever before attained anywhere else on earth. It is acknowledged and proclaimed that he has sovereign powers. It is declared that he is endowed with inalienable rights which no majority, however great, and no power of the government, however broad, can ever be justified in violating. The principle of equality is recognized. It follows inevitably from belief in the brotherhood of man through the fatherhood of God. When the right of the individual to liberty and equality is admitted, there is no escape from the conclusion that he alone is entitled to the rewards of his own industry. Any other conclusion would necessarily imply either privilege or servitude. Here again the right of individual property is for the protection of society."

"When service is performed, the individual performing it is entitled to the compensation for it. His creation becomes a part of himself. It is his property. To attempt to deal with persons or their property in a communistic or socialistic way is to deny what seems to me to be this plain fact. Liberty and equality require that equal compensation shall be paid for equal service. The individual who performs it, Socialism and communism cannot be reconciled with the principles which our institutions represent. They are entirely foreign, entirely un-American. We stand wholly committed to the policy that what the individual produces belongs entirely to him to be used by him for the benefit of himself, to provide for his own family and to enable him to serve his fellow men."

Individual Is Basis.

"Of course, we are all aware that the recognition of brotherhood brings in the requirements of charity. But it is only on the basis of individual property that there can be any charity. Our very conception of the term means that we deny ourselves of what belongs to us, in order to give it to another. If that which we give is not really our own, but belongs to the mother, then we give it, such an act may rightfully be called justice, but it cannot be regarded as charity."

"Our conceptions of liberty under the law are not narrow and cramped, but broad and tolerant. Our constitution guarantees civil, political and religious liberty; fully, completely and adequately; and provides that no religious test shall ever be required as a qualification to any office or public trust under the United States. This is the essence of freedom and toleration solemnly declared in the fundamental law of the land. These are some of our American standards. These principles, in the province to which they relate, bestow upon the people all there is to bestow. They recognize in the people all that there is to recognize. They are the ultimates. There is no beyond. They are solely for the benefit and advantage of the people. If any chance is made in these principles it will not be by giving more to the people, but by taking from them something of that which they now have. It cannot be progressive. It must be reactionary. I do not say that we, as citizens, have always held ourselves to a proper observance of these standards towards each other, but we have nevertheless established them and declared our duty to be obedient to them. This is the American ideal of ordered liberty under the law. It calls for rigid discipline."

DESTROY THE STALKS!

In a communication recently published in The Constitution, J. E. Turner, vice president of the Exchange National Bank of Fitzgerald, stresses the importance of whipping the 1925 boll weevil by destroying the stalks. He advocates community cooperation to that end—or rather a concerted movement which can be made the more effective by establishing in the minds of cotton farmers that on a certain day or week the effort of every farmer shall be directed specifically to stalk destruction.

There is something psychologically appealing in concerted movements, but whether such a course is followed in Georgia this year or not, each individual farmer who, more than anyone else, is the master of his own fortunes, should see to it that the stalks in his own farm are turned under, or otherwise destroyed; but turning them under is infinitely better. This method adds to the growing value of the soil, whereas burning them in the field is a soil detriment. Besides, turning over the ground will permit of planting a winter cover crop, and that should be done where practicable.

However, the point is, the stalks should be destroyed by all means. It is the carry-over weevil that does the damage, and there is no nibbling haunt so inviting as an old cotton stalk. One acre of stalks will hibernate a sufficient quantity of weevils to destroy, at the rate of early spring propagation, a hundred acres of cotton.

The suggestion of Mr. Turner is excellent, and it is a matter of too great importance to have farmers overlook.

CONSTITUTION DAY.

Wednesday, September 17, was the 137th anniversary of the adoption and signing of the constitution of the United States. In many places, especially in schools, the anniversary was fittingly observed by a reading and study of that immortal instrument. Gladstone once said that the constitution of the United States, written by Madison, was the most powerful code of fundamental laws ever adopted by any country.

And yet, how prone we are to whittle upon it, as we would upon a soap box in front of a country store!

The La Follette movement in this country today is an attempt, however differently it may be disguised, to overthrow the constitutional system of the nation. The Wisconsin senator's complaint against the supreme court is that it insists upon holding the constitution superior to any act of congress. Why not? That was the purpose of the constitution, and no law is valid that is not "in pursuance thereof."

That is the purpose of organic law, to furnish the one and only foundation upon which other laws may be made.

If we overthrow the constitutional system of this country we not only overthrow the entire fabric of American institutions, but overthrow government itself.

There is entirely too much tendency in public thought today to drift away from the constitution, and to treat it with a levity that is astoundingly menacing. The guarantees of the constitution as to racial and religious liberties are being attacked daily, indirectly if not directly, and yet an attack upon any one feature of the constitution is an attack upon the whole instrument. It must stand or fall as a whole.

The declaration of independence made the constitution possible. The two are unalterably linked. We observe the anniversary of one on the 4th of July. Why not observe, at least in the schools, and in our hearts, the anniversary of the constitution—the 17th of September?

MORE "INVESTIGATING."

Another carnival of congressional investigations is imminent.

They were provided for political and other reasons before the summer adjournment of congress, and although congress does not reconvene until December these investigations—or those that can serve the administration's political futures best—will begin at once.

The prohibition situation is one that will immediately command attention.

There is no problem that strikes so closely at the popular heart of the country, and with a full realization that an overwhelming majority of the voters of both sexes want more satisfactory enforcement than at present, the republicans plan to "fret and blow" considerably between now and November in impressing the voters with their "righteous indignation" at the way the laws are being flagrantly violated everywhere.

The only fly in the ointment is Senator Couzens, of Michigan, who has just won a great victory in Michigan as an anti-administration republican.

He is at the head of this committee of investigation to deal with prohibition enforcement, and his intense personal hatred for Secretary Mellon, it is feared by G. O. P. leaders, may cause this one campaign plan to become a party liability rather than an asset.

Senator Brookhart, of Iowa, is back in Washington to take up his treasury investigations, and here again the Coolidge leaders are becoming apprehensive, for Brookhart is an avowed supporter of the La Follette-Wheeler combination, Wheeler indeed being his investigating side-partner. This phase of the situation, therefore, does not please the old guard, and an effort will be made to prevent a sufficient quorum from being present so as to defer this inquiry until after the elections.

On the other hand, the administration hopes to make some capital out of investigating the allegations of fraudulent bond issues by the department of printing and engraving; by the investigation of campaign expenditures; by investigations of the United States shipping board; of the Northern Pacific land grants; of the veterans' bureau, and so on.

The one fact that developments daily accentuate is the growing chasm between the two factions of the republican party. In it is the greatest opportunity for a united democratic party.

CARRYING IT TOO FAR.

The Philadelphia Record of recent date publishes a communication from a Pennsylvania rural settlement, signed "Farmer's Wife," that contains a philosophy in connection with the Coolidge-farmer myth that is really illuminating.

This "Farmer's Wife" says: "The Coolidge boosters are making an error which I feel should be corrected before it costs them the loss of several votes among progressive Pennsylvania farmers. Just at present the president is holding down a pretty good job and when I read that he was busy with a scythe and warning his bees beside a room stove, I felt as a present-day farmer should feel, that he should give his dad the comforts of today, install a lighting and a heating system and the very best plumbing system. That is the way we Pennsylvania farmers live and this very simple Vermont life doesn't make the appeal it is supposed to make to people on the farm."

And it is a fact! Stoked that nobody had thought of this before. We recall now that when Vice President Coolidge took the oath of office as president, following the death of President Harding, he did so by a smoked-chimney oil lamp in the Vermont farm home of his father.

Mighty few up-to-date farmers in Georgia nowadays read by lamp light. They have their own little electric or gas plants and their water system and it is surprising to know how many of them have sewerage, and all the other modern improvements.

It is not at all improbable that at the Coolidge homestead when the greasy lamp is still in use that the boys have to break the ice on the back porch and bathe their faces in a tin pan.

And perhaps chuck lightweight knots in a fallen-down fire-place to keep warm in winter, and chuck pillows in the broken window panes to keep out the New England chill.

Fact is, if the old Coolidge Vermont farm is as unprogressive as the republican propagandists are trying to make it in the appeal to the great common folk, then the question arises whether or not son Calvin is really not too unprogressive for a full term as president.

Seriously, of course, the Coolidge's Vermont farm is not run-down and weed infested; and the house is not a broken-down fire-trap without modern equipment.

But the point is, are not the press agents overworking the stunt, as the very sensible "Farmer's Wife" suggests?

Two Ways of Looking At It.
(In the interesting column, "Remandants in the Albany Herald, Editor
H. T. McIntosh writes of the grouch
and the optimist in a rainstorm:
"A man who had been sheltered under in evening looked out on the spectacle and found it depressing. This is a lot of rain for cotton picking time,
he said, with a sigh, 'I wish it were I'm afraid. And hay and peanuts—
what of them?'")

"Couldn't possibly be better?"
averred the optimist, who had just walked up. He waved at the elements that were about him and smiled in a satisfied way. "Listen to the wind,"
he said. "Look at the trees, how they bend before it. The peanuts are stuck in the fields all over south Georgia,
and this rain will only wash the dirt off of 'em—get 'em bright and clean. Then this wind will sweep through the stacks and dry them out
as though they were under a blower in a drying kiln. With a wind like that sweeping the fields, the peanut stacks will dry out almost as soon as the rain stops falling, and we'll have the finest peanuts you ever saw. This wind was made to order just for them."

A Clear Road.
When Saturday night
The church steeple
Is gone to smash!
"I'm out for business."
They hear him say.
And I'll move the mountains
If they're in my way!

And I tell you, people,
That's the way to do:
Clear the track for business
If you'd all pull through!

money out of our announcement column to take up the grocery bill, can-

and thank the Lord we're living!

A Live Community Now.
The Watthens Times man tells this
one:
It's all down with the local doctors. About all they do is swap stories.
Dr. Matthews told a reporter that he recently received a letter something like this: "Dear doctor, I don't start taking medicine I didn't have strength enough to whip my baby.
Now I can whip my husband. The Lord bless you."

The Incurable One.

That folks could grow about.

The Osborn Enterprise "doesn't know that anyone has ever really caught such a whale of a success out of life by just working hard, but it is one of the many things that will go a long way toward keeping down suspicion."

Today's Talk
BY GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

THWACKS.
There are those who seem to have flirted successfully with the moods of the world and to have arrived at the present elated stage of their instinct.
But the majority of us all seem to require the thwacks of experience to give us sense and alertness.

As a boy I used to look up to, idealize, those who seemed to have really inherited prudence and wisdom.

Like Hebe, who, my mythology says,
sprung full bloom in all her freshness
youth from the arms of a seashell, I looked upon the wise eyes of those who came to my father's house.

But I have since learned that wisdom and prudence isn't so easily born into maturity—that it often, and in most cases arises as a product of the direst sort of experiences that years alone are able to mellow and mold.

Thwacks are hard, thwacks, and thwacks and more thwacks: to me this is the history of the wise man who has learned and grown.

I am and of this.
And when I want advice I always go to him who has blundered through to show for what he knows, and in a heart that is big enough to understand.

Troubles are largely a thing for youths. Problems belong to maturity.

Wouldn't it be a strange and uninteresting world without something to discover, something to solve, something
to learn through bitter experience,
troubled sleep and anxious waitings?

Thwacks are as necessary as bread and butter, for you wouldn't enjoy your repeat without them as an appetizer.

So it is that life goes. Let us go with it bravely and do our tasks in good part learning to "never mind" as we go along.

The Passing of Summer
Summer, sweet maid, looks back
At the days when we fondly adored
Her, she says, are darkening
That once were bright and blue.
Little did we realize the truth
That the radiant summer
The radiant ones we made
Lived in the twilight
And in the leafy shade.

Star! She has left a message
To soothe her aches forlorn.
I hear it in the breeze
Through waving branches borne—
"I love you—love you dearly
And I'll strive to comfort
The seasons sweet I taught you
You never can forsake."

We turn to greet the Autumn
And the sentiment overflows
Her robes are gold and purple
And have a silted glow.
But fate tries to smother
Her potent was her spell
Let those declare who hope
Bright days, bright dreams! farewell!

Plunging Through the Mountains

BY JAMES A. HOLLOMON

While the public mind today is very largely centered on road development in the Georgia mountains, looking not only to a possible dawn of a national park, but to making a great section of this state a world-famous health and recreational area, the same as is western North Carolina, it may be information of a more or less startling nature to say that by the middle of next summer, if nothing unforeseen prevents, there will be a permanent macadamized highway fully completed across the Blue Ridge mountains, connecting with another permanent paved highway into Atlanta
from Cleveland, and with a macadamized highway at the North Carolina line just south of Murphy into Asheville on the west, and to the east through almost the entire length of North Carolina to the sea.

With several construction forces
at work on both the north and south
sides of the main Blue Ridge range;
with two great steam shovels ploughing their ways towards each other on the crests of the adjoining mountains, and with macadam forces following the graders, this great engineering feat—practically unknown to the people of Georgia—is actually nearing completion; and when completed, without exception, it will be one of, if not the most, picturesque scenic highway in the world.

That is a broad statement to make,
but I make it without reserve, being quite familiar with every mountain section of America, including the highways through the Sierras, and not altogether unfamiliar with those through the mountains of Switzerland.

Not only is the Georgia state highway department pushing this macadamized highway, on a 6 per cent
grade and with comparatively few sharp curves, through the Blue Ridge, connecting the extensive north and south systems of highways, but it is building a system of permanent roads throughout the entire mountain country, and with a progress that is astounding to those who do not know the facts.

To illustrate, work is progressing in what is known as the east and west highway, between Blue Ridge and Clayton, via Hiwassee, Young Harris and Blairsville.

This will connect with the Atlanta-
Asheville highway at the latter point,
and will, when the two are completed,
give the people of Atlanta—as an illustration—a scenic loop that has no peer in America for panoramic changes in mountain grandeur, incorporating great peaks and verdant valleys, awe-inspiring gorges and fascinating vistas—a system of lakes,
waterfalls, rivers, dashing cataracts,
all that heart could wish for to please
the eye and quicken the soul.

Blue Ridge is relatively the same distance from the Tennessee line that Clayton is from the North Carolina line.

The two progressive north Georgia centers, the one central and the other extreme northeast, are just half way across the entire state from each other.

With the highway from Blue Ridge to Dalton fully completed and hard-surfaced, then, when all have been linked, as will be in the next year or two, Georgia will have a continuous highway paralleling the North Carolina and Tennessee boundaries across the entire state, reaching to the north through various important outlets, as for instance Chattanooga
from Dalton; Ducktown from Blue Ridge; North Carolina east or west
via Murphy from Blairsville; North Carolina again east or west through Highlands or Franklin from Clayton.

It is one of the most ambitious systems ever contemplated by any state in road-building. But this is only a small part, with the exception of the Atlanta-Asheville highway across Neill's gap, with what is being actually accomplished in the development of the Georgia mountain system.

For instance, the macadamized road is being pushed north to the Tennessee line from Blue Ridge at this moment and from Blairsville to the North Carolina line at this moment. And aside from these and others, Rabun has bonded and the highway department soon will carry her roads to the Carolina line; and to the south to connect with the Talulah Falls route, the failure of Har-rard county recently to authorize bonding being a temporary but by no means a permanent delay. In the meantime a paved highway paralleling
the Southern railroad to the South Carolina line, via White Sulphur Springs, Cornelia and Toccoa, is progressing. The entire road from Atlanta to Dahlonega via Alpharetta, Cumming and Dawsonville is practically completed.

The main arteries leading north out of Atlanta and branching off at specific points into various laterals
reaching all sections of the mountain country are being converted into permanent, wide, asphalt boulevards—as for instance the new Atlanta-Marietta highway which is nearing completion, and will be, when completed,
one of the finest pieces of pavement
in this country; and a similar proposed pavement between Lawrenceville
and the present Stone Mountain asphalt boulevard. Work was formally begun last week on the latter.

I began writing merely to tell of a trip of inspection that I made a few days ago with Chief Engineer Neal and Construction Engineer Smith, of the state highway department,
through one section only of the second, or northeast Georgia, highway division.

Leaving Atlanta we inspected first
the new highway that is being constructed north of the Chattahoochee river, in Cobb county, into Marietta.
This is a bituminous macadam with a sheet asphalt seal cover. It is being constructed with an eight-inch compacted gravel base, with a three-inch macadam penetration method, and with a one-inch asphalt seal cover.

It is 18 feet wide, with four-inch gravel shoulders. This particular link begins at the end of the asphalt,
one mile north of the river bridge,
and extends to Smyrna. At Smyrna
it connects with a well-kept asphalt,
connected in turn with an asphalt and brick paving that reaches into the city of Marietta.

Leaving Marietta we drove north to the Cherokee line over a good dirt road finely kept by the state highway department. This, however, should be permanently paved as quickly as possible. It is bad in bad weather, fine in good weather—like so many roads
in Georgia.

From the Cherokee line into Canton there is a fine sand-clay 16-foot highway. It has a ten-inch surface depth, and is well maintained.

North of Canton for five miles
there is an excellent clay-gravel road, 16 feet wide. It is durable in that it has a 16-inch compacted depth. From that point to the Pickens county line the highway department is building a federal-aid highway—5.8 miles of water-bound macadam.

From the Pickens line to Jasper
the department has completed a federal-aid highway—7.8 miles of marble-macadam bound with sand clay.
It has been surface-treated with asphalt oil on which chert has been placed. It makes an excellent highway for moderately light traffic.

From Jasper to Ellijay, 21.8 miles,
the road is dirt and unimproved and from Ellijay to Blue Ridge, 16.0
miles, the road is unimproved.

It is a shame that this important highway from Atlanta to Blue Ridge and thence north, or east or west—
all important—is handicapped by the backwardness of Gilmer county to measure up to her sister counties in highway development.

From Blue Ridge we inspected the macadam highway that is being built north to the Tennessee line, and also east to the Fannin line on the Blue Ridge-Clayton "cross-state" (east and west) highway. These are clay-bound macadam construction.

I have already discussed the Atlanta-Asheville highway across the Blue Ridge. This is being made a water-bound macadam from Cleveland
to the North Carolina line, right across the main Blue Ridge range. The highway from Cleveland to Gainesville has been completed. It is permanent gravel surface and one of the best in this state. The highway to Gainesville via Lawrenceville will be permanent when the macadam link between the latter place and the Stone Mountain boulevard out of Decatur is completed.

From the Atlanta-Asheville highway a lateral highway, nine miles in length, going into Dahlonega, is also to be water-bound macadam. We traversed this road.

I have already discussed the Dal-hona-Atlanta highway via Dawsonville, Cumming and Alpharetta. This is mostly a sand-clay highway, with sections here and there—especially in Lumpkin—of water-bound macadam.
From the Cobb-Milton line to the Cobb-Fulton line this highway is water-bound macadam. In Fulton, from the river to the city, it is an 18-foot bituminous macadam and es-pall.

I have mentioned these facts to show the permanent nature of road-building in north Georgia, and in every section where the counties will show enough enterprise to get out of mud.

One thing is significant, and that is, if the Dixie highway from Chattanooga to the Florida line, situated along the spinal column of Georgia,
is not linked up with permanent paving, it is not unreasonable to expect much of the northern and western tourist travel to come into Georgia in another year via Knoxville and Blue Ridge, provided Gilmer wakes up, and via Murphy and Blairsville. There is no disputing that fact.

In the scheme of highway development in northeast Georgia the United States Forestry service, in connection with the state highway department,
and the interested counties, is planning the opening up of the famous Toccoa basin area of unsurpassed scenic grandeur.

Elsewhere on this page is a communication from Henderson Hallman, prominent attorney and geologist of Atlanta, whose suggestion for the prompt construction of forest roads
in the northeast Georgia mountains is most timely.

Mr. Hallman sounds a note of popular demand for recreation, which has been constantly growing throughout the country in recent years, and this demand for making available the richness of Georgia's mountain areas has been especially keen throughout this state since The Constitution government tour of 1922 focused attention on the Nantahala and Cherokee national forests.

The Toccoa basin development will open up one of the natural wonder-lands of the entire country, and the U. S. forestry service has a wonderful opportunity now to prove that the recreational use of this area will satisfy the demand of the Georgia public for recreation in the national forests. From the standpoint of the city of Atlanta, and all other Georgians south of the mountain divide,
the two approaches through the Wolf-pen and Woody gaps will be equally important, and a forest road through one of these gaps would be incomparable with the same types of road
through the other gap.

It will be recalled that the Na-coochee-Hiwassee Road and Recreation Association has advocated a three-way forest road through the Toccoa basin, and with the essential need of a state fund with which to match the money allocated by the forest service for this work has been suggested by the local counties at the suggestion and in line with the plan of this association. No civic body has accomplished more in the same length of time than has this road and recreation association, and the road proposed through the Nino gap is now open to travel and will ever stand as a monument to the cooperative spirit which has been brought about through this remarkable organization.

The Constitution believes that more local funds will be available for the forest roads through the Toccoa basin
as soon as the main approaches are opened across the mountain barriers which have isolated this area from the south and east and north. The approach from the west and the present roads within the basin are now
in fairly good condition and the forest service is noted for its splendid road work, an example of which has been accomplished recently between Dillard, Ga., and Highlands, N. C., in the Nantahala National forest.

There is no question about the importance of the fullest possible development of the Toccoa basin with forest roads. The fact that these government lands have been withdrawn from the taxable property in Fannin and Union and Rabun counties will be compensated by the revenues derived from the sale of forest products on these lands, 35 per cent of which goes to these counties for their local road and school funds.

It is now certain that construction work will begin on these roads within the next 30 or 60 days, or as soon as the surveys through the Wolfpen and Woody gaps have been approved by the U. S. bureau of public roads.

The main point in Mr. Hallman's letter is the importance of speeding
this road work through these two mountain passes so that the public can have access to the basin from three directions by next summer.

Exit "Coley" Blease; Enter Coleman

Livingston Blease

Washington, September 20.—I wonder if, when the new senator from South Carolina comes to Washington
next March, we shall not have to call him Coleman Livingston Blease instead of Cole Blease; or Coley Blease, as they pronounce it down in his state. We shall have to do something to recognize the great reform that has taken place in Mr. Blease.

At some moment in the last few months, I wish I had the exact date, Coley Blease, the following her of the masses in South Carolina, decided to become Coleman Livingston Blease, slogan. It was like one of those religious conversions that you read about in James' "Varieties of Religious Experience." It is the only case of a sudden conversion of a politician that I know of. Plenty of noisy fellows with years of experience become sedate and temperate of speech. But Coleman Livingston Blease took his state
by surprise.

As governor of the state, he had rampages about stirring up the millions. He had had rather wholesale jail deliveries, and he showed his sympathy with unfortunate generally. His heart was always on exhibition for every one who wanted to see it and for every one who did not.
Generally, he was rated with the untamed Tillman of the early days, with Vardaman, with Jeff Davis and with the "Old Bull" of the old South.
mistakenly with the new David and representative that the south was turning toward.

When are they all now? Pitchfork Ben Tillman, converted slowly into a quick and useful senator before he died; Vardaman, kept home in Mississippi; Jeff Davis, relieved after a short and unglorious career, and Har-

wick, trying vainly time after time to get back.

South Carolina has gone in strongly for the higher plane politics, with Coleman Blease leading the way. In the primary campaign Mr. Blease astonished his state by discussing the issues with the dignity of an Underwood, no personalities, nothing but the solid staff of statesmanship. Two of the contestants, Senator Dial and Mr. MacMahon, took to throwing chairs at each other and were eliminated by the voters as low-planes.

Georgia Apple Growing Industry Shows Big Advance in Few Years

BY J. FRANK BECK.
(Written exclusively for The Constitution.)

In a parade of Georgia agricultural products, the apple has taken its place beside the Georgia peach, its queen. It is a more vigorous fellow, with long life, a whole year if kept cool, while the fruit but lovely, counts her life in days.

Georgia's place among the commercial apple growing states of this country is comparatively recent. The industry has developed in the past 20 years, and is now firmly established. Its present importance is recognized by the inclusion of Georgia apples in the tables and statistical reports published by government, state agricultural department, bulletins, as well as the national sales and shippers' trade bureaus.

Georgia now holds an established position among the apple states of the nation, with a steadily increasing annual production.

In invested capital, yearly production, and number of producing orchards, Georgia leads every state in the south, with the exception of Virginia, where the industry has been longer established, and which second only to New York state, has the largest production of any state east of the banner state of Washington in the west.

The Mountain Sections.

The mountain apple growing counties of Georgia are exclusively in the northern part of the state, with one exception. In the Blue Ridge mountains and plateaus, where at an elevation of 1,500 to 2,500 feet above sea level, natural conditions of climate, annual rainfall and soil combined, provides a combination of favorable conditions to the growing and maturing of apple crops, not exceeded elsewhere. These natural advantages are proven by single specimen apple trees that are well fruited as having reached an age of nearly 100 years. With a long growing season of sunny days and cool nights, giving high color to apples, average rainfall of from 67 to 70 inches, in contrast to expensive irrigation in the west, giving size to apples; price of suitable land for apple growing at from $20 to $30 per acre in our section, as compared with $300 to $500 in Virginia and $1,000 in the state of Washington.

Along with other such favored states partly located in the Blue Ridge mountain range, Georgia apples are acknowledged to be the "finest flavored apple grown."

This year Georgia will market its largest crop. The government report on apple production of the country estimates the condition in Georgia at 77 per cent. and commercial production at over 300,000 bushels.

Georgia's advantages will certainly attract the attention of orchard men generally, and increased capital will develop one of the most important commercial apple orchard districts in the nation.

Among the counties in Georgia, Habersham stands first in importance.

keys in competition with the western apple.

Complete statistics on the state are not obtainable, but the outlook at this time is most favorable for the largest crop at the best price since the war.

Now as to apples as a fruit in the family. The public is not fully informed on the tonic, if not the medicinal value of the apple, and its use by the family should be widely extended, for the old adage, "An apple a day keeps the doctor away," likewise the dentist, has much to justify its healthful properties.

It is by flavor and juice contents that an apple should be valued, and by this standard the beautiful western apple can not be compared with our own home-raised mountain apples.

Atlanta business men have a large invested capital in the commercial apple orchard properties in Georgia and welcome the opportunity afforded by the press to present to the public the merits of the Georgia apple, since it has won a position beside the better advertised Georgia peach as among the money crops of importance in this grand old state of Georgia.

No Better Orchards Elsewhere.

Smaller properties have often made phenomenal records. The writer has visited all the important apple-growing sections in this country, including the famous Pacific coast districts, and is familiar with the best orchards in many states. From this observation he can truthfully state that nowhere is a better orchard than the small property of 14 acres containing 940 trees belonging to H. G. Staight, at Habersham, in Habersham county. In condition and production it can be estimated by the most critical expert as approaching 100 per cent.

This year he will have a production of between 10,000 and 12,000 bushels of first-grade apples, that will bring top prices on the market. From a single Xates tree in this orchard he has gathered 34 bushels of apples in a single season. This orchard has the advantage of age as well as care, being more than twenty years old, the oldest commercial orchard in the district.

Rabun county, with great advantages of beautiful scenic settings, has many fine orchard properties, notably the Duncanson, Cathers, Rosenbush and Fort orchards.

In the northwestern section of the state, known as the Cherokee country, are Fannin, Gordon, Pickens, Murray and Gilmer counties, with Ellijay as the center, where are grown the best of varieties of apples, and commercial orchards are being rapidly developed. Joseph A. McCord, governor of the state, has a bank in Atlanta, has an excellent orchard property in Murray county, and is one of the most enthusiastic commercial apple growers in the state. J. T. Holden, in Fannin county, has one of the best orchards in that section.

In the western part of the state, near the Alabama line, at Esom Hill, beyond a railroad, is one of the largest orchards of the state. Porter Bros. Farm corporation, Dr. S. T. Barnett, president, with 7,000 acres and 27,000 apple trees, of which 18,000 are in bearing, will produce more than 20,000 boxes this year.

After it was fully demonstrated that Georgia could produce apples of best varieties and fine quality, equal to any other part of the country, the question of marketing the production became of first importance. If Georgia apples were to compete in the open market with the superior quality and efficiently marketed products of the Pacific coast cooperative agencies, then Georgia would have to put up an equal pack. The success of the Georgia industry was dependent upon meeting the standards of the western pack, with a corresponding good box. Large investments were at stake, the protection of which demanded modern methods of organization to meet market conditions.

Exchange Markets Fruit.

The result was the Consolidated Apple Growers' exchange at Cornelia, Ga., with a membership of stockholders of some 50 growers, including most of the larger properties in Habersham and Rabun counties.

Through this exchange the entire crop of the members are marketed. The members' apples are graded, sized, polished and packed in the several community packing houses located in the chief apple producing centers, all under the supervision of expert graders and packers, under the superintendence of the exchange.

These main packing houses are located at Baldwin, Cornelia, Clarksville, Demorest and Clayton, with additional plants projected at Hollywood and other centers as fast as production warrants.

These packing houses are equipped with the most modern machinery, that cleans, polishes and separates mechanically the continuous stream of apples passing through, according to size and grade.

The completed pack is a box of apples bearing the label of the Consolidated Apple Growers' exchange and stamped with the name of variety and number of apples in box, determined by size of apple. The result is a box of apples with the guarantee of the exchange, behind it as being exactly as represented. The buyer takes no chances and is fully recognized by the trade.

This is only the third year of operation of the exchange, but already the reputation of this pack is recognized in this and adjoining states, where our apples are rapidly winning favor on their merits in the best markets.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Fatuous Notion.

Please send me your reducing exercises. I want to reduce and keep my daily dozen would be as good a guide as any. (Miss W. C.)

Answer.—You'll have to do more than a daily dozen to reduce. However, I haven't any reducing exercises, and do not advise indiscriminate reduction. I once had a dozen exercises which I urged on the unfit before the war, but along about the time of the war some one stole my exercises and put them on the market. So I worked out a new set, including more than a dozen, and I give them free to all who ask for them. The Brady symphony, I call it now, and I'd like to see a pirate try to steal that name. I do not mean to say that these exercises will reduce, although some enthusiasts will reduce, but they tell pretty tall stories of such effects. My belief is that it takes a great deal more exercise than one can get in a few minutes to reduce weight in any extent, and that the individual must carefully restrict the diet at the same time. Exercise alone often brings about a gain of weight, as thousands of flashy young men found out when they entered the army training camps from offices and stores. I assume you are a girl in your teens, and I advise you not to attempt reduction without your own physician's careful attention.

Inhaling.

Argument.—I say smoking is injurious whether you smoke inhales or not, but my friend maintains it is not injurious if the smoker does not inhale. (L. A.)

Answer.—Whether the smoker inhales makes practically no difference so far as the effects of tobacco are concerned. Perhaps a greater dose can be taken in a shorter period when the smoker inhales.

250 Constitutions Provided Fulton Guests Each Day

"The most convincing evidence we can offer as to the splendid increase we have experienced in business since the opening of the Robert Fulton Hotel," said Manager Harry M. Zobel.

J. V. ROONEY
Assistant Manager of the Robert Fulton Hotel.

Sunday "is that we have been forced to increase our original subscription for 75 Constitutions to 250 papers to supply each guest with the morning news."

Another evidence of the fine business this new commercial hotel is said to be doing is that an assistant manager has been appointed to aid Mr. Zobel in operating the business. J. V. Rooney, who has had several years' experience with the Baron & Wilson hotels, has been named assistant manager.

Mr. Rooney comes to Atlanta from Charlotte, where he served with the Mecklenburg hotel for several months. He has also been with the Exchange, Birmingham, and the Wilbur, Birmingham, and other hotels of the Baron & Wilson chain. Mr. Rooney has assumed his new duties in Atlanta.

Who will write the story of the American Druggist?

SOME day some writer with a gift for portraying the every day things of life in immortal language is going to find the theme for a wonderful novel in the person of the American druggist. It will be a book that will come pretty close to establishing itself as the great American novel if the right writer gives his talent to the task.

Service is a much used and much abused word today. But nowhere in modern life is there a service rendered to humanity that is more devoted and less spectacular than the twenty-four-hour-a-day, three-hundred-and-sixty-five-day-a-year service that the American druggist cheerfully gives.

During this week, the druggists of America are convening in the National Capital, pledging themselves to do even more than they have been doing for you and yours.

MAYOR SIMS SEES SUCCESS IN RACE

Mayor Walter Sims Sunday night issued a statement in which he predicted reelection in his race for mayor against former Mayor Key, which will be decided at the polls Wednesday.

"I wish to thank all those citizens who have given their support and cooperation in my race for mayor," Sims said. "The same spirit of cooperation that was given me in the last campaign has marked the progress of Atlanta for the past twenty months and this same spirit has built our wonderful city."

"I have served the people of Atlanta faithfully, honestly and courageously and have no fears of the result of the campaign. Our city has been built by the spirit of cooperation and the people are going to keep in office men with whom all interests can cooperate."

"I deeply deplore that my opponent and his supporters have seen fit to inject personalities into the campaign which necessitates a reply from me. It is my desire to see Atlanta go forward always with this spirit of cooperation which has marked my first administration and which has been the making of Atlanta. I have set forth at different times improvements already made and those planned, and have demonstrated beyond a doubt that I am for an economical administration."

BIG FIRE COMPANY IS IN NEW QUARTERS

The removal of the offices of C. A. Rauschenberg, Jr., general agent in Atlanta for the Georgia Casualty company, from the old location at 1218 Atlanta National Bank building, to 208-B-10-12, some building, was announced by Mr. Rauschenberg Saturday.

This well-known agency, which was established about nine years ago in Atlanta, has steadily progressed, extending its scope of business and expanding its clientele to the point at which its original quarters would no longer suffice for the operation of the large staff. It was because of this great increase in business, it was stated, that larger offices were required.

C. A. Rauschenberg, who is well known to a large circle of Atlanta business and professional men, has acted as general agent for the Georgia Casualty company for a number of years. With the opening of the new offices of the company here, Mr. Rauschenberg will assume the position of manager of the city office, handling all underwriting and all claims that arise in Atlanta and vicinity. It was stated, in his new connection with the company Mr. Rauschenberg will have the opportunity to greatly extend his service and improve his efficiency as a representative of the company, it is declared.

Mr. Rauschenberg, with his many years of experience as an insurance man, is said to have gained a wide and very valuable knowledge of the business, which renders him of great service to his clients as well as his company.

In connection with his duties as Atlanta office manager for the Georgia Casualty company, it was stated that Mr. Rauschenberg will represent in this city the following well-known insurance companies, among which are the strongest old-line fire insurance companies in existence: Phoenix Insurance company, of Hartford, Conn.; Westchester Fire Insurance company, New York; Great American Insurance company, New York; and the Newark Fire Insurance company, of Newark, N. J.

With the above companies Mr. Rauschenberg will have a full line of casualty insurance, as well as fire.

ties for handling automobile insurance, general fire lines, automobile fire, theft, liability, etc. He will also handle bonds, tornado insurance, etc. Associated with Mr. Rauschenberg will be Howard Geldert, well known in Atlanta insurance circles, who will be assistant manager of the Atlanta office; G. E. Garrison, an experienced and popular insurance figure, who will take charge of the finance of the office. Mr. Geldert will have as his first assistant J. L. Connor, in charge of the underwriting department, with F. W. Forster and Miss J. Van Ralen in charge of claims.

DUBLIN MAY LAND $1,000,000 PLANT

Dublin, Ga., September 21.—(Special.)—Definite assurances that Dublin and Laurens county have met requirements for the location here of a $1,000,000 pulp and naval stores plant are expected from those in charge early this week. For many weeks a delegation of citizens, working with officials of the Southern Pulp and Naval Stores company and city and county officials, have been surveying carefully the local territory, contracting for stumps, and in general preliminary work looking to location and operation of the plant for a period of not less than 20 years.

The survey has developed the fact that Laurens county has a sufficient number of stumps to insure operation of the plant for at least 20 years; that the stumps are suitable for manufacturing processes used by the plant, and are deeper in the ground and much more firm than stumps in other sections of the state. This development has greatly influenced the decision of officials in considering this city as the plant, it has been learned.

To Employ Several Hundred.

Such a plant as is proposed, and practically assured for Dublin, will be one of the largest industrial enterprises located south of Atlanta. It will employ several hundred skilled workers and an equally large force of unskilled laborers, and will have a payroll of more than $30,000 per month.

Dublin, with other cities in the cotton belt in Georgia, has suffered considerably in the volume of business for the past few years, and the entire citizenry is alert and interested in the naval stores plant. Location of such a plant here, it is pointed out, will add to Dublin's credit in the eyes of the world, and will be proof that big business interests have confidence in the return of normal conditions to this section. For this reason, mainly, Dublin is putting forward every conceivable effort to obtain a favorable decision of officials.

The pulp and naval stores plant will first reduce stumps to pulp, then extract resin and other valuable properties, finally disposing of the dross and other materials in various forms.

Contracts for Stumps Made.

A number of propositions are offered farmers in the exchange and barter for stumps. Plant officials agree to remove stumps free of cost for the stump, or agree to pay certain prices for stumps pulled from fields by farmers, or pulled and delivered. The county has been divided into zones, propositions varying according to respective zones and condition of roads and proximity to the plant. With few exceptions, either one or the other of the propositions has been accepted, although in scattered sections there has been some opposition, mainly on the grounds that removal of stumps will deplete the section of its firewood. Against this have been advanced the arguments that removal of stumps will increase cultivation of fields, will mean more acreage tenable, will facilitate cultivation of land in many ways, will enhance the value of property, and will

SUPERIOR COURT TO OPEN SESSION IN SPARTA TODAY

Sparta, Ga., September 21.—(Special.)—The September session of superior court, which opens here tomorrow, probably will be the most strenuous in several years, as four murder cases are on the docket, which, with other civil and criminal business, probably will force court to stay in session for more than a week.

The session will mark the final appearance of Solicitor General Doyle Campbell, as his term expires January 1, and the next session of court will not be held until March. He will be succeeded by J. B. Duke, of Eatonton, who was elected in the primary two weeks ago.

When the Duke of Norfolk built his famous palace at Weybridge, England, in 1677, he was the first known man to have parquetry floors, and to him is due the credit of introducing this fast growing style in beautiful floors.

Visitors from all parts of the old world came to see the duke's innovation in flooring that was so different and many beautiful parquetry floors and standard sizes, and on account of specializing in this work he was in a position to turn out work that won for him the recognition as being the foremost expert in this line in his day and time and he was material and workmen into England, Germany, France, Ireland and other countries of the old world.

The first floors of this kind in this country were laid for Thomas Jefferson in the grand salon of his beautiful and now famous Monticello home, in 1803, and was made of satinwood and rosewood, costing over $2,000, which was a very large sum in those days.

While there were a few scattered parquetry floors laid in different parts of the country between 1820 and 1850, there was no distinctive authority or organization in this country in this line and it was an unknown industry in America until a prominent Rochester, N. Y., physician having a mechanical turn of mind, made an ornamental hardwood or parquetry floor for himself in 1892.

The finished result of the doctor's floor was so striking that his friends insisted on classing it with the best in Europe, and they called it wood-mosaic flooring. And from this hobby of a professional man grew the largest parquetry and ornamental floor business in the United States.

Atlanta Firm Ships Building Material in Train Load Lots

The advantage of Atlanta as a shipping point was foreseen away back in the 1840s by the engineers of that time, and they would be proud men, indeed, if they could see today how well their judgment was being fulfilled.

At the present time there is a passenger train leaving Atlanta for somewhere every 10-12 minutes, and many freight trains in between, so that taken all together from the railroad man's viewpoint, Atlanta is a very busy place.

To keep all these trains moving people are ever on the go and freight is sent in every direction and Atlanta is fortunate in having several large firms that are directing the movement of as much as a train-load of freight every month.

One of these firms is the Keeling-Cassidy Brick company, of 234 Peachtree street, and they are having cars in transit every day in the week going to some place in the southeastern states.

This big firm are exclusive distributors for the Johnson City Shale Brick corporation, located at Johnson City, Tenn., who are the largest producers of face brick in the entire south.

The brick used on the new Henry Grady hotel, in its full range of colors, are an example of the quality of brick that the Johnson City company makes and the new Sacred Heart Parochial school, under construction, is another example of the beautiful face brick in red range and Flemish bond this firm handles.

Keeling-Cassidy also furnished 115 cars of hollow tile for the Henry Grady hotel, and notwithstanding the limited storage facilities for building material at this new hotel, they timed the arrival of this tile so that there was no delay on account of material.

The face brick on this handsome new hotel and beautiful new school will take over 25 cars to bring it here, and 10 cars are being shipped to the new John C. Calhoun hotel in Anderson, S. C.

The new Albany High school requires 25 cars more, which is a train load itself when you consider how heavy brick is. Sixteen more cars go to the Terrell power house for the Georgia Railway and Power company at Tallahassee, Fla.

This firm does a big business in hollow tile also, and are at present having tile come into Atlanta for the new Wynne-Claughton building on Carnegie way and Ellis street, and shipping train loads to the Bay Shore apartment house, Tampa, Fla., and the Archbold Memorial hospital at Tallahassee, Fla.

Forty-five cars of hollow tile is being shipped to the big Montgomery building in Spartanburg, S. C., and 10 cars of face brick is being shipped to the Barlow Baptist church at Bartow, Fla.

Take them all in, this Keeling-Cassidy firm are some busy people, and they take advantage to the fullest measure of Atlanta's great shipping facilities and believe that the early builders of Atlanta built better than they knew.

Atlanta Wrecking Company Valuable Asset to Atlanta

When W. C. Flournoy woke up one cold winter morning back in January, 1912, his worldly possessions consisted of forty dollars in borrowed money, an old blind mule and an idea.

While his capital was not much and the old blind mule would not bring much in the open market, his idea was equivalent to a patent and began to put it into effect at once.

The big idea at that time was to assist in the razing of some old buildings that was to be torn down, taking in part pay such old buildings as they could use at a big saving to themselves.

A part of this big idea, however, was to take the old buildings down in such a way as to save much of the material as possible and put it in as saleable a shape as it was possible to do so right at once.

An old house on Gilmer street was next rented, mainly on account of it having a big yard that would provide plenty of storage space, and the next step was to pass the word around to prospective builders that there might be an excellent material on hand that they could use at a big saving to themselves.

It was not long before every big and little builder in Atlanta and vicinity knew that Flournoy was a square fellow to deal with and he was just as good to sell their surplus material to as he was to buy from.

Then when the big oil companies began the erection of their many handsome filling stations that Atlanta is noted for and they would acquire a desirable location that had an old building on it and wanted the same removed, in a hurry the Atlanta Wrecking company, as this firm is now known, would be the first to be called in and the old building was removed so quick that the neighbors themselves were astonished at the quick work done by this firm.

The Atlanta Wrecking company has out growing three large locations and are now located at 165 Walker street, where they have a large and ware house checked full of every conceivable thing that might be used in building a new building of any kind.

Suppose you was to want some special design of moulding that you had not been able to get elsewhere and thought it could not be had, if you was to visit their big warehouse where the moulding are kept you will come across the patterns here that long have gone out of date.

Great quantities of lumber, both new and second hand, is to be seen on every hand, and strange to say, that while the old lumber looks black and used, the buyers will buy it in preference to the new lumber they have the opportunity of doing so.

A builder last week wishing to buy a bill of lumber was shown to a pile of new lumber that was not cut over 60 days, and then shown a pile of lumber that he knew came out of some old building some where. After looking over both lots he selected the old lumber, Mr. Flournoy who happened to make this sale in person told the buyer that the lumber he bought had just came in from the old German Lutheran church that he was tearing down, and that this church was built in 1835 and was one of the oldest standing churches in Atlanta up until this month.

The buyer who is a practicable builder stated he would use the lumber, no matter where it came from.

The Atlanta Wrecking company, through its splendid cash buying system, buy carloads quantities of seasonal commodities and at this time have on hand a big warehouse full of second hand stove and several thousand of gallons of ready mixed paints that the good people of Atlanta can get at a big saving in money in both lines.

DRIVEWAY COMPANY

STATES 'EVERY INCH

WILL CARRY THE LOAD'

That it pays to specialize has been fully demonstrated by the steady and continuous increase in business received by The Driveway Company. This company was organized about one year ago by James B. Scates and P. A. Hipple—Mr. Hipple being a concrete expert of many years experience—for the purpose of laying permanent concrete driveways, and heavy duty factory and warehouse floors. They have recently taken on the company E. H. Kimball, who was formerly with the National Surety Co., as agent in the sale of construction bonds, and Mr. Kimball is handling the sales of the company.

If you will begin with today, and notice the cracked and broken driveways and concrete floors all over the city, you will partly realize the enormous amount of money that has been wasted in Atlanta on inferior work, and the urgent need for a responsible company specializing in permanent concrete. The Driveway Company has the exclusive right to use the "Vibrolithic" concrete on private driveways in this section. Vibrolithic concrete streets have been giving high satisfactory service in Atlanta for the past seven or eight years, and the success of The Driveway Company was practically assured from the day it was organized. In addition to permanent concrete, distinction as well as been added, and they are designing and building driveways that are "different"—and in keeping with the surrounding grounds and the type of the home. They are also handling both direct and as subcontractors, commercial floors of all kinds, where the need has been fully as great for high class permanent work. Permanent work is the most economical work in the world, and will build for success—as has been fully demonstrated by the remarkable growth of The Driveway Company.

When Mr. Scates was interviewed Saturday by a member of the staff of this paper he stated that as they had laid driveways in all parts of Fulton and a portion of DeKalb counties, they would be pleased to give the names and addresses of any number of several hundred satisfied customers to those contemplating putting in a new driveway.

ATLANTA SAUSAGE

COMPANY IS HAVING

VERY BUSY SEASON

As the cool weather draws nearer sausage in all its varieties is again sent on the hill of fare in the hotels, restaurants and cafes. And the housewives are putting sausage of some kind more often on the family table.

"Atlanta has many good sausage factories, and among them the Atlanta Sausage company, who recently built a model manufacturing plant at 26-28 Howell Mill road, that was well equipped expressly to make all brands of sausage in the most sanitary manner.

The proprietor of this company, P. H. Heimold, who has been making sausage for upwards of 20 years, consulted some of Atlanta's leading architects in planning his new building with the idea of making the best plant of its kind in the country; and while the United States is a pretty big place, it is doubtful if there is a more complete plant for the making of sausage anywhere.

This firm has a capacity of 10,000 pounds a day with present facilities, with plenty of room for additional equipment when it is needed, and are very busy supplying the trade, not only in Atlanta, but in many other Georgia cities and towns as well at the present time.

The mail-order business of this firm is a big thing and Mr. Heimold, who manages the business personally, states that all mail orders received are sent parcel post or expressed the same day as received. This gives all their out-of-town customers the opportunity of getting their wieners and other sausage within 24 to 48 hours after they send their order.

While this firm makes all the standard brands of sausage, they are prepared to make any kind of a special brand of sausage that may be required and are at present running a fine brand of boneless or minced ham that is very nice for lunches and sandwiches.

This firm extends a very cordial welcome to all out-of-town visitors who may be in Atlanta next week visiting the big Southeastern fair, and hopes that all that come to Atlanta upon this occasion may profit by coming.

Atlanta Has Been

In Metal Business

The many friends and patrons of George Downman, who has been in the sheet metal business 35 years in Atlanta and until a few years ago president of Downman-Dozier Manufacturing company, will be pleased to know that his business has shown a marked improvement in the last few months. He has been very successful in closing many new contracts and is busily engaged in erecting contracts taken earlier in the year. This activity has affected all lines handled by Mr. Downman and there is every reason to anticipate a still greater activity.

Among the more important contracts may be mentioned the Hurt closed in the Walton building room in Macon, Ga. For this building, he is furnishing the hollow metal elevator enclosures complete, which includes Wagner hangers and closers, cast iron sills, and also the fire-proof doors for the stair enclosures, and he has also many large contracts for installations in various parts of Florida.

In addition to his standard lines of fire-proof doors and windows, Mr. Downman reports unusual activity in sales of Afoo non-climbable fencing. This material he is furnishing and erecting complete with all line posts and rails. Some of the more important contracts for this line of work, tennis court enclosure for Winship Nunnally, fence to enclose the estate of H. L. Cooke, on Mr. Perrier road, factory fence enclosing the entire plant of Willingham-Tift Lumber company, and lawn fences for R. D. Bame, Judge Jeffries and many others.

Among the many special lines sold by Mr. Downman may be mentioned the Stedman Naturalized rubber flooring, which is used extensively in hotels, banks, hospitals, theaters and churches. The Western Union Telegraph company is using this flooring in many of their new branch offices.

Mr. Downman is also doing many contracts for sheet metal work of all kinds, which includes many metal ceiling jobs, metal file, skylights, ventilators, etc.

Mr. Downman's spacious quarters are located in the Walton building, room No. 610-611, where he maintains an efficient organization and his many friends and customers are welcome at all times and they will find complete metal service in all its branches at his disposal.

VICTORY FOR SIMS

URGED BY RIDLEY

Using as his subject at Third Baptist church Sunday night "Saul, the Politician," Dr. Caleb Ridley discussed the recent Georgia election and the forthcoming city primary, making a plea for reelection of Mayor W. A. Sims.

In contrasting the statesman and the politician he said:

"A statesman is always a thinker. He wades into the wilderness of tangled ideas and emerges with a trail for the ordinary man to walk in. He is always ahead of his time in thinking and often incurs that healthy hatred which comes from a man who is never puffed up. He never seeks to exalt himself.

"He Too," Then.

"The politician is altogether different. He never thinks except in terms of office. After the statesman has cleared out all the rubbish and started a band-wagon to going, the politician says: 'Me, too.'

"Tom Hardwick riding in Watson's wagon is an illustration at hand. When left to himself he fusses and fumes and falls.

"I congratulate the state of Georgia on the election of Mayor W. A. Sims. And yet, Harris has endeavored himself to every real American by his fight for a decent immigration law—the one and only respectable one in 50 years. Harris' record reflected him and Hardwick's record made it out of the question for real Americans to support him.

Wants Sims to Win.

In speaking of the race for mayor now being waged by former Mayor Key and Walter Sims, Dr. Ridley was even more pronounced in his remarks.

Among other things he said:

"Jim Key is not any sort of a man. He has no initiative. He is a man without a sane suggestion on anything. This whole stock in trade is his ability to object to something. I have never heard of a man who was born in the objective case. Jim is anti this and anti that and anti everything. It is a man who is positive on something."

"I am against the Georgia Railway & Power company; he is against the Telephone company; he is against the Ku Klux Klan; he is against Congress; he is against the United States; he is against the world; he is against everything—James L. Key. He is for Mr. Key against all-comers. Jim's platform has always been: 'Myself and my office.'

"He was an awful failure—almost a joke—when he was mayor. He did none of the things he is now preaching. He was a failure in every way that wonderful 'rest room' in the front yard of the city hall.

"I am unqualifiedly for Sims for the following reasons: First, he has made a splendid improvement in the city. Second, he has the courage of his convictions. Third, you can find out where he stands on any issue. Fourth, the men who are against him are politicians, or they have an axe to grind. I want Mr. Key to win just like he won in his remarkable race for congress and just like his anti counternatural win in his race against Senator Harris.

Lyons, Ga., September 21.—One of the largest crowds ever assembled in Vidalia assembled there Thursday night to witness the Ku Klux Klan parade, carrying flaming torches and dressed in white robes and capes. The town was filled to overflowing with visitors and the streets were filled with cars until parking space could hardly be found.

The speaker of the evening was a lawyer from Texas and he is reported to have made an exceptionally good address, pertaining to the aims and mission of the organization, and showing none of the bitterness against any set or organization that has been reported to have been shown in other sections by other speakers.

The parade and meeting were orderly throughout, and were enjoyed by the thousands who witnessed the spectacle.

To Find Positions

For 125 Freshmen

Upon Stanley B. Mathewson, for many years connected with the Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph company of Atlanta, and well-known in this city, this year develops the major responsibility for finding jobs for 125 freshmen at Antioch college, Yellow Springs, Ohio, near Dayton.

Mr. Mathewson is director of the personal administration at the college, in which capacity he is in charge of the "co-op" system at the school, one of the most interesting educational experiments ever made in the United States, in the opinion of naturally known educators.

The "co-ops" as they are called, number more than 500 students, who divide their time between work and study. They alternate in working with various concerns in Dayton, which joined with Antioch college in making feasible its educational plan of work and study.

The plan, in the words of Mr. Mathewson, "normally operates to place a number of young people who otherwise would not be available for labor at all until they had completed four more years of continuous schooling." This is the fourth year that the college has been operating under the "co-op" plan.

Of War Veterans

Reports from the national convention of Spanish-American War veterans, held this year in Michigan City, Ind., at the auditorium Sunday of Fitzhugh Lee camp, No. 6, by John Chalmers and Fred Mylius, representatives of the local organization, show that the veterans of the war achieved such tremendous success on the speaking stage that it was adapted to meet their way to the 1925 meeting at the Hotel Ponce de Leon. It is a step toward a twenty-four hour stop-over here when the delegates reach Atlanta.

The second and positively the last week of the engagement of Douglas Fairbanks in "The Thief of Bagdad" will start at the Atlanta theater with a matinee performance today at 2:45. Two performances will be given daily throughout the week at 2:45 and 8:30. No picture produced in recent years has been received with such unbounded enthusiasm and acclaim as this latest and greatest achievement of Douglas Fairbanks. The picture, furthermore, marks a distinct epoch in the advancement of photoplay productions, for here is presented a work that it would be impossible to reproduce upon the speaking stage.

Mobile, Ala., September 21.—(Special.)—The 1924 baseball season in Mobile ended in a row, and an interesting year in the Southern. A feature of the second division play was the game battle staged by the Chickasaws and Lookouts who, apparently hopelessly committed to a cellar position during the first weeks of the season, hammered their way to sixth place, overtaking both Little Rock and the Cardinals. The Cardinals began playing winning ball near the end of the season—too late to climb out of last place. Birmingham's misdeeds are traced to ineffective pitching.

Memphis clinched the pennant Wednesday. During the last week of play, the Chickasaws won three, lost two and tied one. New Orleans won five games and lost none. Atlanta won four and lost two.

In the last week, the Chattanooga Lookouts led in slugging, with 78

The following table shows the play during the past week, including the final games today:

St. Louis	4	4	0	0	30	61	8
Chicago	6	4	2	0	39	66	7

San Diego	5	4	0	0	37	45	9

From this number the 32 with the best scores for the two days will go to the post Tuesday in the matches, from which will emerge the 1924 champion.

ose 67 was a phenomenal record-breaker. And it will not be surprising to learn that he was a horse with a low medial plane despite Corkan's five-stroke lead.

Naturny Corkan had a world only for putts for the 18 holes. It means that he was down in one eight times at least. As a matter of fact he was sinking 20 to 30-foot putts with ease.

Despite the fact that several southerners are still in the hunt, it seems almost a certainty that Jones will be the one to win. The only other person that young Roland McKenna of Washington, will be in the charged of.

Likewise it seems pretty sure that he will be more than one of the English Wachs who will qualify.

Forance is sitting pretty with his ball Tolley and Hazlett, with 79. He has to wait wonder good to get in.

This boy Corkan has always been to beat on the Merion course. In 1906 he went into the semi-finals when Chick Evans took his measure. "Frankly, I am looking for Bobby to be loose and shoot better than he did yesterday in his round tomorrow. If he does, and Corkran gets back to his normal game, it is likely Bobby will beat him for the low score honor, but least crowd is not worrering in the least about this. What they want for Jones to win his matches after qualifying round is over. He can get it as easy as he pleases tomorrow night. He will be a champion. Apparently takes it easy, so it will be surprising to see him medalist.

Sunday May Day.

Sunday was play day for most he fellows and though a lot of was shot to one was under pressure and it cost for a fight. Monday morning it will be serious and Monday night many will be heaving their fites when the medal is given. The prize money is added and the drawing made the matches. Bobby will play Marston again, the two starting at 15.

It is rumored that the 1925 tournament was held at Oakmont at Pittsburgh, Pa. which had it in 1919 and 1920. Dave and I were very famous and megalomaniac for went into it.

Discovery of Liv-O-Lax.
 "It happened in this way—
 "I was in the retail drug business for twenty-five years. Nearly every day, some woman would come into my store and say—'Honey, I have children in place of calomel!' I hate to give them calomel. I cannot get them to take castor oil and they cannot swallow a pill!"

A Real Discovery.
 "This set me to thinking and experimenting. I was only after a few days I had a number of prescriptions that looked good but I always failed on some particular that I at last hit upon a mixture that does the work. This mixture is Liv-O-Lax because it serves a double purpose, relieving congested liver and constipation at the same time. It is easy to take and children like it."

"For several years, I made Liv-O-Lax just to fill the daily demands I have mentioned, in my own store, but when finally the reputation of Liv-O-Lax spread from Charlotte into the surrounding towns and counties I had to give up my drug store and go to manufacturing Liv-O-Lax in a large way."

What Every Mother Knows.
 "That's the story of Liv-O-Lax and I want you to try it, because I think you know that there is such a close and mysterious relation between biliousness, constipation, indigestion and all the ailments of the digestive tract. It is hard to tell sometimes which came first. You know a laxative is

Red Riding Hood

By
ELIZABETH JORDAN

SYNOPSIS.
Mrs. Morgan Schuyler, one of New York's leading philanthropic and social lights, answered by a young woman to work in her apartment mornings. The advertisement is a desire to hide her identity. Mrs. Schuyler accepts her on trust, and tags her with the name of Hope Emerson.

Mrs. Schuyler's family consists of her mother, Mrs. Van Dorn; a young brother, Jim Van Dorn, and an older brother, Bertie, who is away, but whose room is always kept ready for him. Betty Willis, Mrs. Schuyler's god-daughter, calls during the course of the morning.

INSTALLMENT VII.

JIM VIOLATES A PROMISE.

Mrs. Schuyler and Hope entered the study, and the young man Hope had met earlier in the morning rose from the depths of an easy chair, threw his cigar at a blazing log in the fireplace, and looked at them as if something pleasant had happened. His sister frowned.

"I have absolutely no privacy in this apartment," she complained. "Jim, how many times have I told you to keep out of my study in the morning?"

"Now, let me think!" Young Van Dorn reflected ostentatiously, his blue-gray eyes on Hope.

"Often," he finally admitted, and he appeared to be waiting for something.

"Then please remember it. And won't you be late at the office?"

Her brother glanced at his watch and nodded regretfully.

"Very late," he confessed, and continued to wait, standing firmly on the balls of his feet, his gaze on the face of his sister's companion. "Some

There the two chatted in an undertone for a few minutes.

way, I don't seem to feel rushed this morning. If you would like me to sit down and dash off a few letters—"

Mrs. Schuyler capitulated, but in her own way.

"Hope," she said, "this is my brother, an irresponsible young scapegrace who will yet be the death of me. I think you met earlier in the morning. I seemed to hear an echo of some meeting," she drily added. "Now, Jim, if you'll kindly dash off yourself you'll help us immensely."

Young Van Dorn sighed. He had bowed to Hope formally at the mention of her name, but he did not speak to her. As he was reluctantly moving toward the study door he opened and Sally looked in.

"Mrs. Parmenter is on the telephone, Aunt Maud," she called. "She wants to have a nice, long talk with you, and I told her you were right here and looking forward to it. O, hello, Jim! I didn't suppose you'd be able to get out of bed today, after last night!"

Van Dorn held up a warning hand.

"Come in, Sally," he invited in a loud whisper. "But keep well to the right of your Aunt Maud. She's a bit edgy this morning. I don't believe even Mrs. Parmenter can soothe her."

He stood back to permit his sister to continue her resentful journey to the telephone and the undesired talk with the most persistent nuisance of her circle, and then, his arm through Sally's, led the flapper to the window farthest from the desk. There the two chatted in an undertone for a few moments while little halos of cigarette smoke formed about their heads. Seated at the big, flat-topped mahogany desk, Hope began to go over Mrs. Schuyler's letters. For a few moments she was conscious of her companions in the room, but soon she forgot them. The telephone rang, and when she rose to answer it she discovered she was alone.

She drew a quick breath of relief. That deliberate lingering of her employer's brother had hurt and annoyed her. It had seemed a direct violation of his promise. But evidently he had merely been teasing his sister. She inferred that baiting Mrs. Schuyler was the pet diversion of Jim and Sally, and an unexpected sympathy for her employer welled up in her. An emphatic slam of the front door proved that some one had left the apartment, probably his mistress. The new maid, or secretary—she wondered whimsically which she was—settled down contentedly to a morning's work with the mail, interrupted, as it developed, by several dozen telephone calls and a fairly steady ringing of the front door bell.

Responding to the bell—a duty lightly touched upon by her employer—proved to be in itself a taxing occupation, and this probably explained why Kawa so firmly repudiated it. The hall man seemed constantly bringing mail. There were three morning deliveries of letters and two of newspapers and circulars. The personal purchases made by members of the family were also delivered at the front door, and apparently the two women had already begun their holiday shopping. Callers came, friends and strangers, all with touching confidence that they would be welcomed, however unconventional the hour of their arrival. Visitors from other cities left cards and letters of introduction. Hastening from door to telephone and from telephone to desk, the newcomer realized afresh that her position was not a sinecure, and she rejoiced in the knowledge. She would have time here to think only of the immediate duty before her. That was exactly the sort of situation she would have demanded, if she had been in a position to demand anything.

"You will lunch with mother and me when we're not formally entertaining. You know you're my home secretary now."

Thus spoke Mrs. Schuyler at the luncheon table that noon, and thus simply was Miss Emerson's new position in the household defined.

In her heart the girl was rather relieved. She had not objected to being a maid. Her immediate necessity was work, and it was not for her to cavil at the special aspects it presented. Moreover, she felt, with entire conviction, that no work one does well is beneath one, as the phrase goes. But there was little question that it was more interesting to be Mrs. Morgan Schuyler's home secretary than her handmaiden.

"She might write some letters for me, too, if she has time," Mrs. Van Dorn mildly suggested. She smiled at Hope as she spoke, and Hope smiled back at the plump little gentleman, for whom she had felt an immediate liking.

"She might open them at least," the latter's candid daughter contributed. "The way you allow letters to lie around your room for weeks without taking the trouble to glance at them is simply shocking, mother."

Mrs. Van Dorn defended herself with dignity.

"I always open them if I know the handwriting," she submitted, "but I simply haven't been able to find a moment lately for my mail."

It was Hope's first glimpse of one of the old lady's most conspicuous characteristics. From the time she rose at ten in the morning until she went to bed at the corresponding hour at night Mrs. Van Dorn considered herself "worked to death," as she expressed it. She had the air of being breathless from her exertions. But at no time could she or any one else point to anything she had accomplished or to any diversion of hers except "listening in" at the fine radio equipment in her bedroom. Another outstanding quality, Hope soon discovered, was her complete devotion to her son Bertie. A third was her deep religious feeling, which found daily expression in fervent thanks to God when a member of her family did anything especially nice for her. A fourth was her interest in names. Almost any name immediately reminded her of some one of the same name whom she had once met, and she was moved to a passionate but usually futile effort to connect the two individuals.

"You know I haven't time to attend to the mail that pours in on me, any more than you have," she now aggressively amplified, "with all I've got to do!"

"I've paid this month for a dozen tickets for charity affairs alone," Mrs. Schuyler grumbled, "tickets you held on to so long that they couldn't be returned. If you'll let Miss Emerson open your mail, it may save us a lot of money. You can throw most of the letters in the waste basket," she reassuringly informed the new secretary.

Hope acquiesced in the new arrangement. She was an analytical young person, and she told herself that the incident was rather typical of the average woman's position in the world of work. She had been engaged for clearly defined duties at a stipulated salary, yet within three hours of the time of that agreement her duties had been more than doubled, with no thought of an increase in the payment for them. True, she had offered to help with the mail, but not to any such degree as was unfolding; and her originally defined duties would have filled her time. She did not see quite how she was to carry all the additional work in four hours daily, but she would do what she could and leave the rest without compunction.

MAXSON FOXHALL JUDILL

NOSES.
By Margaret McBride Hoss.
A few noses are made for ornamental purposes. But most of 'em are just necessary evils. For instance, there's the nose that's always poking into other folks' business. And the noses that just insist on being blown. I haven't much enthusiasm for noses in general. But I've gotta sneaky weakness for sassy, tip-tilted ones. Splattered with wee golden freckles.

Felt Hurt.
Mildred: "Why did you break off your engagement to Jack, dear?"
Betty: "Well, any man that thinks more of a few cigars in his vest pocket than he does of me, isn't worth bothering with."
—Herman White.

New Alibi.
Crabshaw: "How is it dinner is so late?"
Mrs. Crabshaw: "I had to wait so long in the barber shop."
—Mrs. F. B. Rogers.

The Female of the Species.
Most women have more clothes on their minds than on their bodies. When a woman lies about her age, she's kittenish. When she lies about another woman's, she's caty. Local color is what most women get at a beauty parlor. The difference between a chorus girl and a society girl is that the one has talent. Women are like mushrooms. Either they're a delicacy or they're poison. A society woman's "first kid" is her vanity case.
—Violet M. Leroy.

Never Satisfied.
"What a clever woman your wife is," Mr. Neers. I understand she makes all her own gowns, and such beautiful gowns, too."
"That's just it. She makes 'em so darned beautiful that it keeps me broke buying hats to match 'em."
Mrs. J. C. Gilmartin.

Close Work.
Madge: "I like those hugging dances."
Marjorie: "So does Charlie. He's a regular bear at them."
—Henry Wollberg.

A Question.
A "Jelly" of the present time rushed into a cafe. He turned into the waitress, and this is to her did say: "Oh, just one real soft scrambled egg." The waitress (wicked elf!) said, "Is that an order, please, sir. Or to announce yourself?"
—D. B. H.

Business and Pleasure.
"Mabel is a lucky girl. Every winter her husband takes her south for a month or six weeks."
"Did she marry a millionaire?"
"No, a professional baseball player."
—Isaac Anderson.

Her Fate.
Friend: "What happened to that peach of a stenographer you had?"
Business Man (dryly): "Oh, we had to 'can' her for not getting down here on time."
—Oscar Brockhausen.

Brace Up.
All collars with Summer timidity. Have now resumed Autumn rigidity. They no longer shrink. Or disgracefully sink. As they did through the heat and humidity.
—H. P.

Naturally.
De Style: "What is a hymn of fate?"
Gunbusta: "The fellow who calls on the girl you love."
—E. P. Pitzer.

Saved.
He did everything he thought would aid him in gaining her favor—denouncing anyone she denounced, praising whomever she praised, reading what she read, disapproving of the plays she condemned, selecting the sports she selected, admiring the fashions she adopted, embracing the fads she embraced, studying what she studied, and even sticking to the dishes that she relished most. It all grew most monotonous and it rather militated against his winning his way into her heart. "The trouble with you," she said, "is that you have no views or opinions of your own." "Oh, I have," he answered, "I think you are the loveliest, most charming, most adorable, and the dearest girl in all the world."
That was original enough for her and the wedding day has been named.
—Nathan M. Levy.

The Editor's Gossip Shop.
Summer is gone—Fall is here. The cooler, zippier weather of this welcome season should be productive of much good humor. Schools are in full session. Football teams are having their first games. Business is better—always is after a hot summer. Therefore, everybody ought to be in good humor. And it's up to you to get some of it by being on the alert.

Pretty Tough.
"Before we were married," remarked the pretty young woman who had married the aged millionaire, "my husband said he would die for me, and now he won't."
